

He gave a speech today. Spontaneous, according to everyone.

But I recognized the phrases.

They were borrowed – stitched together from things others had said over the past two weeks.

A summary. A remix. A beautiful lie.

People clapped.

I didn't.

I wonder if he even knows he's lying anymore.

Or if the lie became the only way he could sound like himself.

– 0